

TSS Archive Project

The Hiroshima Peace Program TSS Archive Project is a peace promotion project created by TSS-TV, a local broadcasting company in Hiroshima, the first place in human history where an atomic bomb was used in warfare. This project offers special documentaries, peace-related news, and hibakusha testimonies online with English subtitles for the world to watch, so that people will better understand the reality of the bombing.

By putting these videos online for anyone to watch and learn the horrors of nuclear weapons, we hope not just to realize a peaceful world free from conflict, but also to give hope for the future to those affected by war—those who have lost loved ones and whose cities have been destroyed—by showing them how Hiroshima went from utter destruction to the vibrant green city that it is today.

Someday, somewhere in the world, someone might be inspired by watching one of our videos and go on to dramatically change the future.

When faced with the choice of reconciliation or separation during a disagreement, they may choose reconciliation because they recalled the lessons of our videos. Children who watch these videos may grow up to work in areas where their decisions determine the future of the nation.

Even if we don't immediately see the results, we can still sow the seeds of peace for the future right now.

TSS will continue its mission to broadcast information about Hiroshima for the present and for the future.
